

Estimated £3m saving for NHS with NICE Guidelines for Greenlight xps laser

Released 14 June 2016

As Men's Health Week runs from 13-19 June, Urology Partners are very pleased to add our emphatic support to today's announcement from NICE backing the provision of Greenlight XPS laser prostatectomy as a treatment for men suffering with prostate related water works symptoms.

NICE acknowledge the significant advantages of this treatment over more standard treatments, such as the TURP. With a quicker recovery time and no overnight stays in hospital, this is good news for both patients and the NHS.

NICE recommends laser treatment for benign enlarged prostate glands

The condition is common affecting 60% of men aged over 60 years old

13,600 men could benefit from the laser treatment recommended by this NICE guidance...

...and the NHS could save up to an estimated £3million each year.

See the NICE guidance at www.nice.org.uk/mtg29 for more information.

As long term recognized experts, Neil Barber and Richard Hindley, Consultant Urological Surgeons at Urology Partners, who have been performing these operations for over a decade, remark "Finally, Greenlight laser has the endorsement of NICE, we hope this means that more men in England and Wales will have the chance to enjoy the benefits of this excellent treatment".
